PARISH COUNCIL NEWS

Kings Coronation 6th May and Bank Holiday Weekend

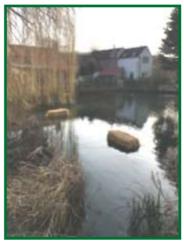

The coronation of King Charles 111 is an event to be celebrated. Some funding along with guidelines for events is now available.

There will be an open day at the village hall on 4th March 2023 from 11.00am until 1.00pm for people to come along and discuss, and join in, potential ways that the village can celebrate this momentous occasion.

POND NEWS....

You may have noticed some work being undertaken on the village pond last month. 4 bales of Barley (pictured) have been added to the gradually sink water. they will and are environmentally useful in cleansing the water and to keep algae down. In addition vegetation has been cut back and any rotten duck eggs from last season removed from the waters edge. Following the diesel spill and subsequent water treatment the reed bed has been tidied with the hope that new vegetation will grow this spring and summer. It's good to report that a recent pond inspection also revealed that there are no signs of vermin but the rat traps remain in place just in case! The pond will continued to be monitored over the year and any work will be undertaken as required.

Finally and following deterioration of the wood a new fence has been put in place and electric cable box reconnected so that this years Christmas lights can go ahead as usual!

Nick Jones

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

Following a spate of thefts a lock was fitted to the Poo bag dispenser on the Recreation field last summer and this seems to stem the flow of rapidly disappearing biodegradable bags. However following the dispenser being topped up in January it was soon emptied and in a clear act of vandalism many of the unused bags were found strewn along the West Embankment and were resting in trees. The dispenser remains empty whilst the Parish Council consider purchasing more, their cost is met from the Precept that we all pay into via our council tax charges.

This abuse of a facility that is provided to keep our village clean and free of dog poo is unacceptable and must stop.

You know who you are. It's not big and it's not clever.

If this continues the council may well have to review providing the facility which benefits us all. So stop it, now.

As with dog fouling, if you see anyone engaging in this antisocial behaviour and don't feel you can safely challenge the perpetrator/s you can report it via the ERYC Website www.East Riding.gov.uk/antisocialbehaviour.

Thank you

Nick Jones Parish Councillor

MAKE A CHANGE BECOME A COUNCILLOR

Are you passionate about your community? Do you want to help make a longlasting change? Do you have innovative ideas for the council? Do you have concerns about a specific issue and want to do something about it? If this is you, then we need you. We need people from all backgrounds and experiences who reflect their community to put themselves forward for election. Make a change and become a councillor.

Councillors are elected to represent the local community, so you must either live or work in the council area. Becoming a councillor is a rewarding experience as you will be able to make a change in your community to help improve residents' lives. A councillor's role can include developing strategies and plans for the area, helping with problems and ideas, representing the community, working with other local community groups, decision making and reviewing decisions and talking to the community about their needs and what the council is doing.

If you are interested in joining us please contact Sandra Morrison pc@middletononthewolds.co.uk or 01262 470496 for a co-option pack, or if you wish to become a candidate in the May elections information packs will be available from ERYC around March time.

A NOTE FROM YOUR VICAR

Lent and Passion Flowers

In our last, heavy clay soil, garden back in Essex we had a beautiful Passion Flower which scrambled over the side fence and bushes along its boundary. It is a drought tolerant plant – which is good because I am a terrible gardener! After the bloom has gone it produces oval orange 'fruits', some where I read that they are edible, named 'maypops' and can be made into jam - though I never tried this and am not recommending it!

During the weeks of Lent, which this year began on Feb 22nd (Ash Wednesday) many churches follow the Stations of the Cross. These can vary enormously from child friendly pastel colour pictures to stone carvings and graphic visual depictions of the torture, crucifixion and death of Jesus.

The Passion Flower itself has been used as a tool to symbolise various elements of the crucifixion. Some of the explanations seem to be a bit of a stretch, while some can, maybe, help us to reflect in a different way.

- 1. The ten petals representing the 10 of the 12 apostles who did not betray (Judas) Jesus or deny him (Peter).
- 2. The three topmost stigmas (the part of the flower that receives the pollen and rises out of the top centre of the passion flower) as attached to their styles (tiny little stems) recall the three nails.
- 3. The five stamens that hold the anthers (the pads of pollen) together signify the five wounds. (hands, feet and side)
- 4. The anthers alone represent the sponge used to moisten Jesus' lips.
- 5. The central column of the three stigmas and five anthers signifies both the post to which Jesus was scourged and also the cross on which he was hung.
- 6. The 72 radial represent the crown of thorns.
- 7. The leaves of most species are shaped like a lance and represent the spear thrust into Jesus' side.
- 8. The red stain on the corona at the base of the central column and the red speckling on the style holding the stigma is a reminder of Jesus blood.
- 9. The tendrils symbolise Jesus holding firmly to his purpose, and being supported by God's love.
- 10. The wonderful fragrance is said to represent the spices that the women brought with them on Easter Day.

11. The duration of the flower's life is three days: the time elapsed before the resurrection of our Lord.

Information from Margaret Realy - Benedictine Oblate & Author

Whatever your view, it is quite an amazing flower.

During this 'lengthening of days' (the origin of the word 'Lent') as we wait for the coming of Spring I hope we can all experience again the joy and excitement of new life all around us.

LOCAL BIRDS & WILDLIFE

Goldcrest

Spring is on the way! As I type the snowdrops are nodding in the breeze, the birds are collecting nest material, and the sun is shining. And I am going to ruin the moment by going back to Sinister Bluetits. Actually, one ray of light for bluetit fans: I have done some more research and it would appear I was wrong – the culprits are actually great tits! (That's not much better really, is it?)

Scientists watched great tits visiting a remote cave in Hungary for 22 days over the course of two years and found the birds were alerted to the location of a colony of pipistrelle bats by hearing their calls; when their squeaks were played as an experiment the great tits would all fly up to investigate. The birds were recorded killing bats 16 times. However, when offered sunflower seeds and bacon scraps the tits stopped flying into the cave. If you want some gory details (and I am guessing you might not) then there is an article on The Guardian website, dated 8th September 2009 with more.

Well, let's put that image out of our minds and go on to happier things! Andy and Liz got in touch about a pair of bullfinches seen at the beginning of February – here's their letter in full:

"Every day we get plenty of chaffinch and robins visiting our garden to feed on the sunflower hearts that we provide, but these bullfinches, seen in my neighbour's garden, were attracted solely to some apple trees. The bullfinches are a large finch; the male is particularly handsome, with a rose-pink breast and an ink-black cap. This pair were helping themselves to the young buds on the apple trees, which they eat when their usual food of seeds and berries become scarce at this time of year. Apparently they are the enemy of commercial fruit growers, able to eat 30 buds a minute! With the male was his female partner. In colour she is a washed-out replica of the male bird. Apparently these birds pair up for life, so whenever you see one you will soon see the other; they do not split up even in winter. We have lived in Middleton for 12 years and only seen bullfinches on one other occasion – this was a possible family group of 4 birds – seen on the west embankment. They are very shy and didn't allow us to come close."

Staying around the village, Pat got in touch: "Just happened to look out of the dining room window in time to see coal tits in the redcurrant bush. Blue tits in the cherry tree earlier but I haven't seen coal tits for a long time. A very nice surprise! We used to get lots of long-tailed tits but again not for years. Pied wagtails could be seen on the school roof too. What's happened to them all eh. At least we do get to see birds of prey and of course the geese

- always a sight to behold!"

Sheelah was happy to see a goldcrest in her neighbour's garden, and Janny and Barry are seeing their usual garden visitors beginning to turn up again, but their best sightings were at Bempton, where they took these photos: "Here are two pictures taken recently at Bempton Cliffs of not such common birds: the long-eared owl hiding on its day time roost, and a female brambling. The reason why most people don't see the brambling is because it is so much like it's cousin the chaffinch. The male bird is quite different and easily recognised - we recommend you always look at female chaffinches and you might see one of these - the differences are very subtle."

I had a very interesting outing recently (which sent me Googling frantically once I got home). Sheelah had reported several ducks with pompoms on their heads in Bishop Burton pond, and she took me to see them. There they were with all the other mallards, although they seemed to be keeping near to each other rather than mixing freely with the rest. It turned out that they are crested ducks. The pompom is due to a genetic abnormality of the skull, and they are actually bred to make a feature of this, although from what I read they have an increased incidence of infertility and sterile eggs. The most popular ones are white the Bishop Burton ones have presumably crossbred with wild mallards. Apparently they can be bred into any breed of ducks apart from Muscovy ducks. So keep a look-out when you are at our village pond, and let me know if any turn up here!

In fact let me know of any interesting things around the village (and slightly further afield). We should soon be seeing early butterflies - according to Winterwatch on the BBC, brimstone butterflies have a sort of antifreeze in their blood so that they can survive winter (they like to hibernate in ivy and can survive to below minus 10C. Presumably this is why they are one of the first butterflies to be seen, before other species have had a chance to hatch out of their chrysalises). So I look forward to hearing from you!

LOCAL HISTORY

LIVING CONDITIONS

"On the Yorkshire Wolds we mostly barley eat For there they grow but very little wheat We lived on barley bread and barley pies And oats and peas the want of wheat supplies"

Writing in 1889 and quoting from Captain Anderson's poem "The Sailor" The Reverend Woodcock illustrates the mode of life on the Wolds at the end of the eighteenth century. On the question of dress he states that a white jacket, a pair of corduroy trousers, a long smock, pulled up and tied round the waist and a badger skin cap – such was the garb of the wolds labourer one hundred years ago. Today there is scarcely any perceptible difference between labourer and landlord as far as dress is concerned.

On the question of living accommodation he writes: "The cottages (called nooks) were mud walled and thatched roofed, about six feet high, some had beetling brows beneath the small windows like eyes twinkling in the sun, and leaned like the tower of Pisa; being whitewashed and embowered with flowers they presented a pretty appearance; which helped to compensate for the wretched accommodation within. Behind the door hung the charm stone and horse shoe upside down for the purpose of keeping out the witch and wizard. A spacious chimney, projecting halfway across the nook, left sufficient space for a large family to gather round the fire and see the daylight out of the top of the chimney without rising from their seat. A wood fire, with a sprinkling of coal, gave warmth to the event. Each cottage had its well fed pig and this home fed bacon was a great treat, for as an old woman said "there was first a laveret of fat and then a laverat of lean," No pigs can beat those fed on these wolds.

Every man was his own banker and any surplus cash was put in some place in the nook, regardless of all interest. When a good sum had been accumulated it was put in the foot of an old stocking and hid in some beam or boak. Sums of money, thus secreted, have been found in old nooks. The farmer and his wife used to go to market on the same horse, the farmer in front the latter behind on a pillion seat; eggs, crockery and other breakable articles of domestic use were often the worse for the journey though they went only at the rate of three miles an hour."

The Reverend Woodcock goes on to state that " The mode of agriculture was, most primitive and looked quite oriental as sturdy and compact oxen, with large curved horns, were to be seen at work instead of horses and machines. In 1768 wagons were drawn by two oxen and two horses. When the land had been ploughed and made ready there were no drills to disperse the seed. A man mounted on a horse rode up and down the ridge scattering the seed while at ease. The corn of which there was but a scant crop, was taken to the nearest market in sacks, on the backs of horses."

Of leisure he states: "When they were not working the pleasures enjoyed by the people were not of an elevated nature. Men climbed the greasy pole for a leg of mutton and women tied in sacks ran races for tea, sugar and snuff which were rare and costly luxuries in those days. Football, quoits skittles, wrestling, dog and cock fighting, rat hunts, boxing and fighting, bull and badger baiting were also indulged in. It was also a time when poaching, cattle stealing, robbing hen roosts and killing game were common."

In 1812 after enclosure had been achieved Henry Strickland was commissioned by the Board of Agriculture to compile a survey of the state of the area which will be the subject of the next article.

Acid Row by Minette Walters

Acid Row is the name the beleaguered inhabitants give to their estate. A no-mans land of single mothers and fatherless children – where angry youths control the streets.

A young doctor Sophie Morrison visits a patient who she finds out later, when trapped in the house by rampaging youths, is a paedophile. This runs alongside the reports of a tormented child who has gone missing. The book moves at a pace that never slows until the final murderous ending.

The Bullet that Missed by Richard Osman

This is the third book in the Thursday Murder Club Series. The 4 ageing characters from different backgrounds, brought together in a community of older people, make up the Club. They became a quartet of amateur sleuths whose story holds the reader from the first page with a warm, witty and wise warning never to underestimate the elderly who have the time to explore the mystery of Bethany Waites or Alice Cooper.

THE GREEN GROUP

Middleton on the Wolds Green Group Winter Update

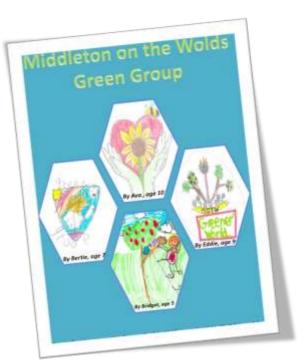

We have been busy planting trees and clearing areas of brambles on the east railway line after liaising with the East Riding of Yorkshire Council. Their Senior Estates Surveyor said "I was impressed with the scale of the works that had already been completed, in terms of clearing brambles and undertaking extensive understorey tree planting in addition to gapping up some missing hedgerow sections. The path is clearly in regular use, and is providing an excellent facility for the village".

In addition to this we have been working with the school to renovate their sensory garden in partnership with the Middleton on the Wolds School Association. We are renovating the schools polytunnel, which is a fantastic resource for the school and the Green Group. We aim to prune the fruit trees and bushes to encourage a better crop for the children to enjoy.

With funding from the International Tree Foundation, we have planted with every year group Rowan, Hazel and Downey Birch trees either in the school field or on Beacon Park. Why not walk through the Beacon Park to see the hand drawn pictures the children have labelled the trees they planted.

We had a great turnout early on several Saturday mornings before Christmas plant to 28,000 snow drops bulbs around the village signs entering the village. We are keeping our fingers crossed that in the next couple of years these will bloom beautifully that's if the rabbits don't get them!!

Finally we had а logo competition with the school children and received some fabulous entries. We were impressed with the designs and had а lovely afternoon presenting the prizes despite school's boiler the not working!!

Here are the winners:

As the weather starts to improve and we all start to think of the great outdoors again the adventure industry in Nepal also starts to swing into action. Nepal has, over the past few years, developed guite a reputation as a destination for adrenalin junkies and thrill seekers.

The spiritual mountains have always been the centreplece of this industry. Trekking to Everest, Annapurna, or any other mountains will surpass anyone's expectations, but the mountainous topography and the river system spilling out of glaciers makes many other adventurous activities possible as well.

Nepal is gaining a reputation for being one of the best destinations in the world for white water rafting and it is advertised as the best way of exploring Nepal, as it takes you through hamlets, canyons, dense forests, and wildlife. Although it has to be said that some of the white water rafting there is maybe not for the faint of heart!

Bungee jumping is firmly on the death wish list in Nepal. There is one that is described as 'exhilarating' from a 160m high bridge into the raging river below in the deep gorge of the Bhote Koshi river near the Nepal Tibet border. Some might use different adjectives to describe jumping off a 160m high bridge and hurtling towards a raging torrent below.

Mountain biking in the diverse terrain of hills and mountains throughout Nepal will provide anyone with a tremendous experience of biking. Belting around the hidden trails of the mountains in Nepal is definitely one on the bucket list of adventurous mountain bikers. There are an ever-increasing number of good organised mountain biking tours and it is one of the best ways to see some of the hidden corners of this stunning country.
